

Community Development, Creative Communication, Website Design

Duration: Minimum 6 months

Hours: 5-10 hours per month

Type: Voluntary

Are you interested in working with a young, creative international team changing the face of global health communications?

NCDFREE is looking for new team members with experience in community development, creative communication or website design to develop powerful global campaigns that break the conservative health sector mould, and translate complex ideas into simple, powerful narratives on the global burden of noncommunicable diseases (NCDs).

Our campaigns to-date have a global reach across 50+ countries with millions of impressions, and the NCDFREE brand is highly regarded across the world with the likes of the United Nations, World Health Organisation and other major players in the sector.

We have a strong focus on ensuring all of our content is positively framed, innovative, and high quality. Our current work focuses on innovative place-based digital story telling that links local experiences to global action on NCDs.

Position Description

As part of the NCDFREE team, you will play a key role in the following activities,

- Developing creative digital campaigns
- Input into creative stories on NCDs and community
- Support creative ideation for NCDFREE activities
- Working with NCDFREE's Executive Director to develop strategic brand position and message

What can you expect from us?

- Become part of a dynamic, innovative international team who are leading a youth-led start-up striving for social change.
- Share your voice, develop new and existing skills, and enhance your employability on a well respected international platform.
- Engage and develop a network of likeminded and passionate individuals, driven and dedicated to changing the world for the greater good.
- Connect with NCDFREE mentors and leading global health stakeholders in health, academia, art, technology, communications, law, marketing and more.

If you are interested, please send an expression of interest and resume to NCDFREE's Executive Director Timothy Kariotis at tim@ncdfree.org

Applications will remain open until all roles are filled
